Afterword

In preparation for the takoyaki party in the next volume, I'm setting up a takoyaki grill at home.

...Anyway, that was Tsuredure Children volume 5. This volume cuts off right before summer vacation. While drawing, I desperately tried to recollect how I felt before summer break when I was a high school student. Though it's been over a decade since I graduated high school, and I've all but forgotten the details, I still feel like a high schooler, mentally, which is a little strange.

...I want to hold on to my youth!

You may have noticed while reading, but I was unable to prepare any extras pages for this volume. I'm very sorry to those who were looking forward to them. Even though I'm still in my twenties, I'm rapidly losing the ability to bite off more than I can chew, and it's getting harder to fit time into my workload to draw the extras.

I could stay up all night singing karaoke no problem when I was a student. Now I get exhausted after just an hour. Not to mention the fact that I still sing all the same songs I liked as a student makes me think I'm in trouble.

I'll try harder for the next volume. It is kind of sad having no extras pages, huh?

To my editor, the publishers, the bookstore employees, and to the readers who occasionally get a little teary-eyed, thank you so much for making this possible.

until next time.
